

Training in end of life care – e-ELCA

An essential e-learning resource for health and social care professionals

- A multidisciplinary programme that covers both clinical and social care themes
- Interactive exercises allow you to explore sensitive and challenging aspects of end of life care
- Developed by the Association for Palliative Medicine of Great Britain and Ireland and Health Education England e-Learning for Healthcare

The End of Life Care for All (e-ELCA) learning package supports the training and education of all those involved in delivering these vital services.

The learning content covers key clinical themes but it also helps to develop many soft skills that are crucial in decision-making discussions with patients.

The content has been written by a multidisciplinary team of subject-matter experts. It meets the highest professional standards and the emerging curricula for end of life care qualifications.

This e-learning is most effective when combined with mentor support or face-to-face classes to help build up core knowledge and to consolidate your understanding.

key features at a glance

- Multi-professional use

Quality-assured training

The importance of delivering excellence in end of life care is a key priority in the UK National Health Service (NHS), as highlighted in recent government reports and by the UK's Care Quality Commission. Therefore, the need for high-quality education in this area has never been greater.

e-ELCA offers an invaluable learning tool that supports the NHS End of Life Care Strategy. However, the themes are relevant to healthcare professionals globally.

You can access the learning content via the Internet. Each of the eight modules focuses on a specific theme, from advance care planning through to symptom management, social care and bereavement.

The modules are divided into easily digestible e-learning sessions, with each session taking around 20 to 25 minutes to complete.

Exploring sensitive issues

Using real-life case studies, you can build your understanding of the challenges faced by patients, and their carers, during the final stage of their lives. Self-assessment exercises also enable you to check your understanding and reinforce learning.

You can record your progress online and produce certificates as evidence of completion.

Accessible anywhere, at any time, e-ELCA is a first-class e-learning resource that fits around a busy professional life.

“ This is a gold mine of resources for the national qualifications in end of life care. ”

National Association of Palliative Care Educators

“ We have used e-ELCA as part of a number of methods to underpin and reinforce learning delivered in the classroom. We found the activities helpful in testing the knowledge gained through face-to-face learning. ”
